

CAROLYN INMON

Retired Teacher

As the former President of the California Community College Association, I believe in our community colleges' mission. As a retired K-12 and community college teacher, I value the functions of our local colleges in the community. As a longtime south Orange County resident and taxpayer, I'm committed to the conservation of scarce resources to best serve our community, without raising taxes.

Saddleback and Irvine Valley Colleges provide affordable education for economic recovery, workforce development and retraining, and for lifelong learning. Our colleges need leadership that will:

- Maintain low college fees without new taxes or bonds

- Prioritize limited resources to keep dollars in the classroom

- Balance the district's budget without incurring debt or unfunded pension liabilities

- Allow degree-bound students to quickly transfer to 4-year colleges

- Help displaced workers to new employment skills

- Enable workers to learn the latest job skills, providing local businesses with highly trained employees

- Support lifelong learners

I'm proud to have helped many students reach their goals, and I'll use my experience as a leader and teacher to enhance the quality of programs provided by Irvine Valley and Saddleback Colleges. Your vote for me will keep our colleges devoted to serving our community and our students.
